NEW LIBRARY FINALLY MATERIALIZES

Do you remember when Dodge Library was the building across from Richard's Hall where the odds for finding a book due the next day was as good as winning Megabucks?

The Dodge Library was started in a one room classroom in the Boston Y. It was expanded to two classrooms in the basement of the present Dodge Library, and expanded further to become the library of the university. The reason most of us have spent hours searching for a book that we cannot find is because of a lack of continuous funding — a shortcoming that, hopefully, will not plague the new library.

In order to build the new library the university came up with the Century Fund to raise the necessary money that would be needed for the project. Since there is a lack of available space at Northeastern, the university decided to build the library on part of the Hayden Parking Lot.

The design of the library was done by the Architects Collaborative and the construction was done by the Jackson Company. The new library will feature the use of on-line computer card catalogs, a photo copy center, large capacity study rooms, increased seating capacity and an updated resource center, including language and record labs.

All of this sounds great, unfortunately its completion date of 1990 means that we will not get to use it. However, in a few years, I suppose we could come back to the new library and try to find that desperately needed book.

Northeastern is a university with many cultures and interests represented throughout the student population. It is no wonder that the university has over 150 recognized student organizations where one can explore their own interests, personal growth, and academic and professional development. For some, the choices are overwhelming. To others, who are involved in many different groups, the choices are rewarding.

Most of the organizations are staffed by the dedicated few. These are the students that sacrifice their free time to do something to help their group, the university, or the community. Their commitment cannot be underestimated. As Malcolm S. Forbes said, "You can easily judge the character of others by how they treat those who can do nothing for them or to them."

Taking a stand on an issue is what the Student Government Association is all about. They serve as the official liaison between the students and the faculty and administration. Influencing change in educational programs, processes, and administrative management of the university are just a few of the things going on behind the door of the SGA Senate Chamber on the third floor of the Ell Center each Monday at noon.

Allocations to student groups through the Budget Review Committee, office spaces and improvements to the Ell Center through the Student Center Committee, and other student issues are worked out. Some of SGA's work in the past five years includes the Teacher Course Evaluations, the possible introduction of a trimester system at Northeastern, and alternative meal plans in the dorms.

International Student Forum

The International Student Forum (ISF) is a cultural and ethnic organization whose main objective is to enhance the image of the international community on campus, to unite students of varied cultural backgrounds, and to promote communication and an understanding of cultural differences among American and International students through social, educational, and cultural activities the ISF plans each year.

ISF has been an organization for twenty years at Northeastern. Walid Chamoun, a senior in the College of Business Administration and president of the group, sees accomplishment in the traditional events they hold and change throughout the past five years.

"In addition to perfecting our traditional events, ISF took on new projects that never occurred before in the organization's history. Such projects were the coordination of panel discussions on international current events, panel discussions on problems affecting the international students' quality of life, and lectures on different topics affecting the international community today."

Panel discussions included "The Israeli/Palestinian Enigma" and "China, Hong Kong and 1997". Four Lebanese students of four social, cultural, religious, and educational backgrounds debated during the Lebanese Crisis. However, the ISF is best known for its International Week Festival each spring when students feast in the Quad on the best foods the world has to offer. Welcome receptions for new international students are held each fall, and a Thanksgiving Potluck Supper has been expanded to include international and American clubs from Boston area colleges and universities. The ISF hopes to establish an ISF award for students who contribute their spare time to servicing international students.

SENIOR

WALID G. CHAMOUN

Walid Chamoun a twenty-two year old International Business and Marketing major came to Northeastern University from Beirut, Lebanon after several recommendations from his brothers, Nassib and Ziad.

"I wished to meet and socialize with various people and learn about the American culture, that is basically why I became involved in Student Activities. As a freshman I founded the International Business Organization in 1984. It was a good experience for me because I learned that organizational skills are very important."

In the winter of 1985 Walid took an active interest in the International Student Forum. "I hoped to meet many foreign students of diverse backgrounds. It was successful, as a result, I know that we must respect people for their values and social norms. It is important for people of different cultures to understand each others cultures and especially one another."

Following Walid's extensive career in Student Activities he was elected treasurer of the International Student Forum (ISF) from 1985 to 1986. He was later re-elected for a 1986 to 1987 term.

Presently he is the president of the ISF which boasts twenty-five members representing a variety of cultures. The purpose of ISF is to bring about an understanding of different cultures to the students. As the leader Walid ran the ISF ". . . like a small business because I am a business major." He made more assertive and demanding requests of his members. As he says, "I'm annoying when it comes to something that needs to be done!"

In answer to the question what would you like to see continue or change once you leave ISF he answered, "Improve recruitment and membership. I would suggest attracting students through a well detailed explanation of the club. I would also hope that students would opt to become involved not just for their resume. I would very much like to see the university become more involved and open toward nationalism."

When questioned about his overall feeling of his experience of Student Activities he responded, "There is no spirit of activism when you have the real spirit it is shot down. The spirit is dead compared to the sixties! I think that there is a lack of spirit due to the university schedule, and the fact that this is a big and diverse school resulting in much difficulty in gathering people together. This can also be attributed to the fact that more students have to work to support themselves, resulting in no time to become involved in any student activities. To answer your question it was overall a good experience, fun, but hard work!"

CLOSE-UP
PETER L. KRAUSE

Peter Krause, came to Northeastern for many of the same easons that we all share in common. He wanted to go to a niversity that would offer him the chance to transfer easily to a ew major without the hassle of changing universities. Boston as an attractive place, and Northeastern had co-op. He left his ome in Old Lyme, Connecticut in September 1984 and entered s an engineering major.

After trying out that for a year, he changed his major to ommunications, co-oped at WFSB Channel 3 in Hartford, onnecticut. His interests in technical study and communi- ations made way for a practical major in Business Admin- tration, Peter's current area of study.

As a middler, he decided to "get involved" with the Student overnment Association, where he focused most of his energies the Club Ell Committee as chairperson in the Spring of 1987, d Academic affairs Committee chair in Winter 1988

While he was Academic Affairs Chairperson, he oversaw the plementation of Teacher Course Evaluations (TCE's). The mmittee called for increased evaluation standards, including ider participation by the departments of each college in the university, and overall improvements to the process. The Committee also conducted a survey in February of 1988 regarding English Language Proficiency problems amongst the instructors at Northeastern. A short term and long term solution was worked out through the backing of the Board of Trustees, and the Student Government Association.

In the Spring of 1988, he ran for president and was elected by one vote. His campaign slogan was "If you haven't seen me in the Senate lately, baby you're missing out!"

When asked about his feelings on the student activities at Northeastern, Krause said, "everyone is into their own group and there is no of interconnectiveness" between the numerous organizations. He sees a "momentum building", however, and that the return of student activism at Northeastern has begun.

Peter plans to "go to the beach" after graduation and perhaps a job in the boating industry. His advice to the class of 1989: "Show the Spirit of '89".

DOWNHILLERS
SKI & SPORTS CLUB

The Downhiller's Ski & Sports Club is one of the most active special interest groups at Northeastern. They provide low-cost sporting trips and activities for students. Hitting the slopes in the winter and whitewater rafting adventures in the spring are typical activities of Downhiller's members.

Linda Roth, Downhiller's president, reflected on the group's accomplishments over the past five years. "Providing a good time to a large percentage of undergraduate students" is the main objective. "Sugarbush is probably the best annual trip we run each year along with our whitewater rafting adventures."

As an active participant in student activities, Linda sees the staff's work as good experience that can be used after graduation. "Our staff has worked really well together for goals such as planning and executing marketing plans and doing business on a daily basis. Learning how to work with professional ski and sporting businesses, hotels, tour companies, and others is very good experience."

Downhiller's encourages alumni participation, so drop them a line sometime or see them on the slopes!

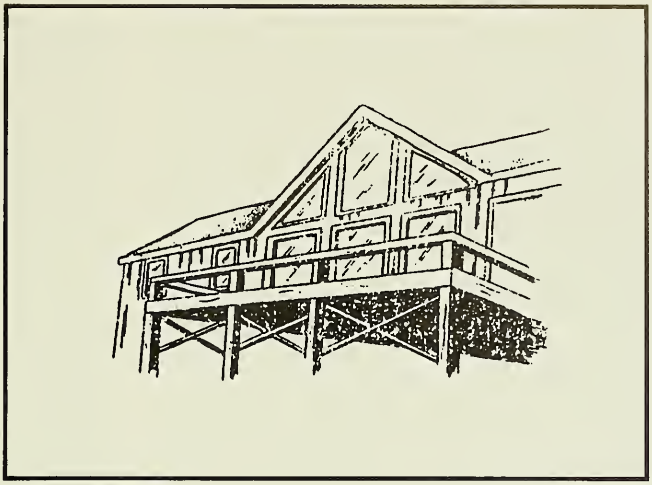
NUHOC



If you like to "head for the mountains", the Northeastern University Hus-Skiers and Outing Club is the club to join. NUHOC runs weekend trips throughout the year which provide an escape from the bricks and pavement of Boston. Backpacking, canoeing, biking, rockclimbing, caving, sky diving, hanggliding, and skiing are just a few of the trips NUHOC members take.

NUHOC's Brown Memorial Lodge is located in the White Mountains and is used as a base for hiking and mountain climbing, as well as cross country and downhill skiing. The Lodge accommodates 40 people and includes sleeping quarters, kitchen, fireplace, and a two-seater outhouse!

Acid rain, toxic waste, Boston Harbor, and nuclear reactor meltdowns are just a few of the environmental issues that affect the future of our planet and mankind. Students for Environmental Awareness is an activist group which seeks to educate the community of Northeastern on concerns such as these through a lecture series on current issues and an annual Environmental Awareness Day each spring. Many of its members are involved in other area and national environmental groups.

The 1980's saw the result of years of illegal dumping of toxic wastes which contaminated drinking water supplies. Beaches were closed as needles and hospital wastes washed on the shorelines of the Northeast. The Chernobyl Nuclear Plant melted, and the Boston Harbor cleanup was finally begun.

SEA will continue to educate the students about issues such as these which concern us all.

From Grad Student To Director

In 1984 little did Sherry Norman realize that her position as program advisor as a graduate student would lead to her present position of Director of Student Activities. According to Sherry, "The goal of the Student Activities office is to help all the organizations run efficiently. Our general philosophy is to assist students in leadership and professional development. We are here to assist on a one on one consulting basis, to help and cut the red tape."

There are one hundred and fifty student activity groups encompassing the following categories: academics, cultural and professional organizations. The number of older and new groups remain quite equal. This number depends upon the quarter and how many new groups apply for provisional status as newcomers. Sherry stated that a newer trend in student groups was developing. "Newer groups seem to reflect away from the "me generation" and into awareness groups such as environmental and support organizations." As for the future of Student Activities Sherry sees more awareness groups arising and continued help for the student groups while cutting some of that popular and prevalent Northeastern University red tape.

Δ Φ Ε

The Phi Eta Chapter of the Delta Phi Epsilon sorority was founded at Northeastern University twenty years ago, and is the oldest international sorority at the university.

Delta Phi Epsilon prides itself on the accomplishments it has achieved. Its sisterhood represents every field of study offered at Northeastern; every sister belongs to at least one other organization at the school, and high academic standards are stressed.

The sisters are actively involved in community service projects, such as the Leukemia Society, the Children's Hospital Christmas Telethon, annual fundraisers for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and the hosting of senior citizen dinners.

Delta Phi Epsilon was founded to promote good fellowship among the female students of various colleges in the United States and to create a society based upon good moral character, regardless of nationality or creed. Their motto: "To be rather than to seem to be."

The Iota Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta sorority is one of the most dedicated on campus. They have a long history of educational, cultural, political and social services for the community.

Annual programs include the Black Organizations' Night for incoming freshmen and Greek Games to raise money for their Professor's Endowed Chair. They provide public service at places such as the Roxbury Boys and Girls Clubs, convalescent homes, battered women organizations and tutorial services.

In the future, Delta Sigma Theta would like to increase community involvement in its programs. It would like to encourage political awareness among the student population.

NU Epsilon Theta is the second oldest fraternity at Northeastern, with a history of pursuing high academic and social qualities. The brothers of NET combine educational support with affordable housing and social activities for its members.

One of its major tasks was a move from its home in Brookline of 36 years to a new fraternity house at 388 Arborway in Jamaica Plain. They hope to become an asset to their new community and to continue to work with the IFC (Inter-Fraternity Council) to improve the social life of its members. NU Epsilon Theta works closely with alumni and encourages their support.

Phi Kappa Tau is one of the newest fraternities on campus. After going through a one-year provisional period, they were officially recognized by the university on May 27, 1988.

During 1987, Phi Kappa Tau won the title of Fraternity of the Year. A brother, Greg Eakman, was fraternity Man of the Year. And yet another brother, Stu Hemingway was crowned Mayor of Huntington Avenue at the annual Homecoming festivities.

Like other fraternal organizations, Phi Kappa Tau seeks to increase student and alumni involvement in the greek system and provides support for its brothers, while teaching them ways to act socially responsible.

SENIOR CLOSE-UP

SHIRELL A. YOUNG

Jennie M. Lee

Unlike the majority of seniors at the university Shirell Young has contributed much of her time and energy to student activities. A twenty-two year old majoring in Public Administration, she had her first taste of student activities as a young freshman when she served as the freshman director of communications for the NU Black Students Association. As director, she was in charge of advertising and programming events for the organization. She also ran for the position of president of the organization that same year. It was a surprise to her that she won the election because she was a freshman. As the president of the NBSA, a major change implemented by Shirell was to rewrite the constitution to adapt to current issues and to encourage recruitment.

Shirell served the presidency of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Iota Chapter. She worked every other weekend with homeless children or the elderly.

Shirell related her concern about the lack of student participation in student activities with the following statement, "Northeastern doesn't emphasize student activity involvement. The co-op fosters the attitude of me me me. Between academic and co-op responsibilities there is no place for student activities."

The role of actively participating in positive activities for society will not end once Shirell graduates, but will hopefully continue in the form of a non-profit legal services organization for those who cannot afford legal services. She hopes to be the founder of such an organization in the near future.

The Silver Masque is the student theatre organization of Northeastern University. They have been active for the last 80 years, and are working harder than ever to provide cultural entertainment for the faculty and students of the university. They are located on the third floor of the Ruggles Building, adjacent to the Department of Theatre and Dance.

This year, the Silver Masque presented "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown", the first musical to be presented at Northeastern in recent memory. The sold-out performances and enthusiasm of the audience showed that there are people here that appreciate a good show, especially one put on by a group of young talented thespians.

NU BANDS

In the words of NU's Band their goal is, "To have an organization which emphasizes challenging and enjoyable music while also providing a social outlet. We also strive to promote spirit and pride throughout the Northeastern campus." There exists four varieties of the NU Band.

The concert band plays contemporary and traditional wind music. At the end of each quarter the band plays a concert performance in addition they participate in NE Intercollegiate Honor Band.

The largest spirited group on campus could possibly be the pep band which cheers on the hockey, basketball and football games at home. You can remember them cheering on the Huskies at the Beanpot.

Chamber winds band concentrates on more advanced music while performing throughout the academic years.

Lastly, the jazz ensemble and combo bands flaunt both a big band and combo style jazz. This band tours in the spring while performing around Boston and the university.

Chances are if you hear music to your ears in the Ruggles building it just could be one of the four bands.

The Council for University Programs (CUP) organizes events for the entire student body. These include concerts, lectures, and special events that are of interest to all students. CUP works closely with the Student Activities Office, and has worked in conjunction with Club Ell, ISF, IFC, and the Student Alumni Association.

One of the councils' major accomplishments in the past five years was to hold the first major concert in over 15 years at Northeastern. The concert in the Spring of 1988 featured Stevie Ray Vaughn with guest John Cafferty. The success of the concert has encouraged the council to plan a major concert every spring.

Another popular event was the G. Gordon Liddy/Abbie Hoffman Debate at Alumni Auditorium. In addition to these events, CUP also is the mastermind of such activities as Fall Fest, Winter Carnival, and Spring Fling.

ENTREPRENEURS CLUB

The Northeastern University Entrepreneurs Club was started in the winter quarter of 1987 in response to an increasing awareness of the benefits of starting and developing a new business venture. They assist students in running their own businesses while still in college, and learn the strategies of small business through sponsored events.

Business ventures by students have ranged from selling t-shirts to selling software. The club has sponsored small businesses on campus, and has attracted various speakers from the business community.

Through its natural affiliation with the Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs (ACE), the group has contributed to improving the credibility and experience of today's entrepreneurs, tomorrow's business leaders.

LINDA ROTH

Linda Roth, an expert on the slopes, and one who knows the ropes of Student Activities. A senior speech communication major, Linda joined the SGA during her freshman year and soon became chairperson of the Club Ell Committee. Her desire for public speaking experience grew to an interest in programming events for the students of Northeastern. She joined the Downhillers Ski and Sports Club in her sophomore year, and soon moved to the position of advertising and publicity manager. She described the club as "lacking initiative and leadership" and moved forward to help turn this around.

Her creativity and motivation helped move the group further toward self-sufficiency in the following years, and in the Spring of 1988 she was elected President of the club. She takes her job seriously, as she feels she has a responsibility to the students of the university.

Her experience in running a student organization has caused her to gain more insight then most students on the subject of student activities in general. She feels that Northeastern is the "capitol of bureaucracy" and that the Student Center is treated as a "facility" with student groups being the "tenants." She feels that the Center is not "pro-student" run and should be run for and by students. Student apathy could be diminished if there was some enthusiasm shown from the administration to get students more involved.

Her advice to the Class of '89: "It's not the piece of paper (diploma), it's what you do with it."

have passed since the Class of 1989 first heard President Ryder say that whatever we do, right or wrong, will be connected with the label, "a student at Northeastern University." Some walked out before the speech in Matthews Arena was over, some left during the lesson on singing the school song, and others didn't bother to go.

The same can be said of student involvement at Northeastern University. Some students left groups before they got a chance to show what being a member of a group was all about. Some left before learning the rewards of being involved in an organization, and others didn't bother to try and find out.

For those of us that did stick around, we came, we saw, and we went. What we brought with us is intangible, yet priceless.

HUSKY

The nickname "Huskies" was adopted by Northeastern University in the year 1927, and the first Husky arrived on campus March 4, 1927. Classes were cancelled for the afternoon in order for 1000 students and the university band to greet him at North Station when he arrived on a train from Alaska. He was presented with an Honorary Degree, and named King Husky.

Sapsut, aka Sapsut, was the Noonof Noonok of Marly, the lead dog on Leonard Seppala's famous team that rushed diptheria vaccine 645 miles from Neena to Nome, Alaska in 1925 to save the stricken village. His first athletic event was a track meet in which Northeastern set three school records.

King Husky I reigned for 14 years, as the current King Husky VI continues a proud dynasty representing the energetic working student, which is a symbol of Northeastern University students.

DOES NU HAVE A RUGBY TEAM

The year 1985 is a landmark date in rugby history at Northeastern University. Four intense rugby players, Robert Hubbard, Tony Kalajakis, Rudy Machacek and Sean McCarroll formed the first NU rugby team. For three years the team has been persistently trying to obtain status as an officially recognized university team sport. Although, the rugby team knew they were good and should be merited recognition as a university sport NU would not grant this title upon them. The university's reason was that the liability risk factor was extremely high to support such a team. Finally, in September of 1988 NU granted the team their present state, club status, which is the first step toward full recognition. At this time NU provided a student trainer.

At the beginning the team was in the Division II league with only one side as opposed to the present four sides. Now they are in Division I with one of their toughest opponents, Harvard. The players run the team and in order to afford the $30.00 weekly cost of renting the playing field at Magazine Beach along with other expenses they have several methods of raising these funds. The primary bulk is financed through charging dues from each player. Colorful t-shirts are sold and other monies are raised through social fundraisers.

As far as the team's playing abilities are concerned one can judge easily from the following. Players, Bob McCarthy and Mark Phillips were chosen last spring to play against the Australians by the New England Collegiate XV. In the Tournament Rugby Beanpot the team without a coach came in second following their rival Harvard. At this a player commented, "We're gonna win this year!" In December of 1988 the team was once again chosen as a prominent northern team to play against teams like LSU in the Citrus Bowl Tournament.

Once June 17, 1989 slides around the team will be seeing a large departure of players including Hugh Plitt, president, and co-captain Joe Miller. Other departing seniors include Kevin Alice, Mike Bradshaw, Dave Gilmour, Mike Harpster, Cal Hennessy, Andy Hermo, Rich Hilton, Bob McCarthy, Bill Pavilids, Mark Phillips and Bob Stanley.

GYMNASTICS

Strength, power, dedication and talent are qualities that the NU Women's Gymnastics team possess and these factors are what made NU one of the most difficult teams to beat in the east. The Huskies ended their 87-88 season with a record of 11-1, setting all time highs in all four events (vault, 46.7; bars, 45.75; beam 45.35; floor, 45.9 and a total team score of 181.55). The NU women ended their season first in New England, second in the ECAC Championships, and for the first time ever, winning themselves a spot in the NCAA Championships at Penn State. "Our team went into the NCAA's ranked seventh and pulled ourselves up to third, that is quite an accomplishment for our first year in such a prestigious meet," said six year coach, Peter Gobiel. Holly Szabo, the tenth year veteran as head coach, was also chosen as NCAA Coach of the Year for 87-88.

The most difficult job as coach for Peter Gobiel is, "keeping 20 women happy for 8 months a year, 5 nights a week, 3 hours a night." For a team that spends that much time together, there needs to be more than dedication to gymnastics. All of the women on the team have spent the greater part of their lives as gymnasts, they start at age 5 or 6 and train right up to the collegiate level and unlike most other sports, it doesn't get easier with age.

According to Marquis Hopkins, the team trainer, "working with the gym team is a challenge; overall, the girls are tough, there are a few that let nagging injuries get to them but for the most part every practice is an experience." "Because the sport of gymnastics puts so many strains on different body parts, the team really keeps me on my toes," said Hopkins.

It takes more than talent to spend that many hours in a gymnasium night after night, not to mention the time that it takes away from academics. According to Lisa Cleary, co-captain 88-89 and ranked second in her class of physical therapy majors, "I've been doing gymnastics for so long, I have a routine and I've found that I accomplish more with a busy schedule."

Obviously, with any sport a team unity often develops. The NU women's gymnastics team has formed a sisterhood bonding to one another — a force like unity. As 87-88 captain, Susie Nyberg states, "coming to the gym is a lot easier when you know you'll be spending the next few hours with a group of your closest friends."

The 88-89 season is in full swing with healthy gymnasts and a difficult meet schedule. Presently the team record stands at 4-0 (Feb. 89). This includes beating UNH in a dual meet for the first time in 15 years. According to head coach Holly Szabo, "at this point in our season, our ability is better and our scores are higher." As far as expectations go for the rest of the season, "last year we were on a wave of new found talent, now we have expectations to live up to which makes things all the more difficult," said Szabo.

"We want to prove that last year's season wasn't a fluke. Many times teams peak for one reason and then die out, we don't want this to happen here at NU," said Gobiel.

FOOTBALL

Although not the most successful overall team at Northeastern, the members of the football team always fight for their position on the gridiron. After having their first winning season last year since 1983, the Husky's are looking forward to their 1988-1989 season. This season's schedule starts the Husky's out at Parsons Field against Towson State University. This is only the second time NU has had to face Towson St., since their series only began last year with a Husky win, 39-22.

Starting his eighth year as head coach, Paul Pawlak faces the big question of who is going to gain the coveted quarterback position. Will it be last year's replacement for injured Jim O'Leary, Rich Rodriguez? Or will it be up and coming, Tony Lubischer or freshman Byron Hunt? Only time will tell.

HUSKY PRIDE RETURNS TO ROWING

1989's graduating oarsmen have seen the best and worst of times. During the 1986 and 1987 seasons, the first varsity posted only one victory in ten dual meets and that was against the lowly Columbia. The rest of the squad did not fair much better. Things were looking dismal at the boathouse on the Charles. Suddenly, at the end of the 1987 season, a bright gleam of light appeared on Coach Congrams dogs as the stern four oarsmen of the varsity boat shocked the rowing world with a gold medal at the National Championships in the four-man event. After that date, the ball just kept rolling. During the 1988 season, the four varsity crews rowed their way to 19 victories versus only six losses in regular season racing.

After winning themselves a closet full of opposing racing jerseys, the first varsity eight etched a notch in Huntington Avenue history. First, they capped the bronze at the Eastern Sprints, then became the first Husky Crew to capture the gold at the IRA Championships, and peaked with a silver medal at the National Championships. The crew was rewarded with a trip to the prestigious Royal Henley Regatta in England.

The second varsity, determined not to be outdone in the medal count, proved that success can be contagious. With the help of seniors Dave Craig, Scott Quiana, and Brian Etough, the J.V. earned a bronze at the IRA's and a silver at the National Championships, in the four-man event.

The winning fever was rampant as Dave Petus and Chip Claflin were not without a few new BU shirts before going through the eligibility turnstyles. Even Jim Gilmartin decided to get back into the act after a one year hiatus in 1988.

Yet, the varsity eight clearly stole the show in 1988 by earning the United States team and Coach-of-the-Year awards along with the coveted Rusty Callow Award as the nation's top crew team. The eight were led by a host of seniors. Undoubtedly, the presence of World Champion and Olympic Bronze Medalist Jeff McLaughlin, provided the team with a renewed sense of pride. Ron Korb, the quiet force, graduates with two Turtle Race Championships and a chest full of medals. Captain Ed Novecelli's determination and hard pulling could never be questioned. Novecelli's predecessor, co-captain Micheal Porterfield hangs up his oar just prior to marching in the Garden in 1989. Lastly, and possibly as significant as McLaughlin, Steven "Big" Potter graduates after an MVP season in 1988.

With momentum on their side, the crew's future looks great with increased participation, a new boathouse, and Coach Congrams on their side.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

The 1987-88 season for the Huskies was an overall unusual one for the usually victorious Huskies. The record was 15-13 overall record (11-8NAC). Sophomores and juniors dominate the team, but senior Derrick Lewis who scored an average of 14.6 points per game a year ago is still on board to aid the Huskies. As for the upcoming season the Huskies hope to sport their usual winning streaks of the past years.

SKATING TO ANOTHER CHAMPIONSHIP

"We're having another great season," says the Women's Ice Hockey Coach Don McCleod, as the team continues their 35 game winning streak.

The defending ECAC Division I National Champions have begun the 1988-1989 season with a record of 8-0-0. According to Captain Donna-Lynn Rosa, "It's not too easy being Number One. Teams don't want to play us, especially in the Ivy League."

Coach McCleod praises all 19 team members as being "exceptional in their own way and they're all good students." Coach McCleod describes Donna-Lynn as "the best defenseman in the country," and a "major offensive threat." Donna-Lynn and fellow teammate Tina Cardinale were named All-Americans in the 1987-1988 season.

The team is looking toward the end of the season, with the Beanpot Tournament, ECAC playoffs, and possible participation in the National playoffs. Donna-Lynn feels confident of success in the Beanpot; the team has had "no trouble in the past few years." If the team finishes first at the end of the season, Northeastern will have the home field advantage in the ECAC playoffs. From there it would be to the Nationals, but for now the team is concentrating on continuing their undefeated record. Says Donna-Lynn, "It's the most intense goal."

BEANPOT MEMORIES

One of the most prominent sports teams on campus can be found dueling it out on the ice at Matthews Arena. The team has so far won two Beanpot Tournaments during our five years here. Whether they will win the next one in our last year as seniors is up in the air. According to Coach Fern Flaman the prospects of winning this year are, "... full string looks good. I hope BU holds out." Flaman says this because the Huskies have beaten BU throughout the season. The goal for the season according to Flaman is to finish in one of the first three spots in the NCAA.

Two departing seniors include Captain Dave Buda with eighteen goals and eighteen assists so far this season and Rico Rossi with nine goals and eighteen assists into the season.

AQUA HUSKIES SWIMMING TO THE TOP

The Husky men's swimming and diving teams are having a "very good year" according to Coach Janet Swanson. "This year looked as though it was going to be a building year. We did far and above better than I thought was capable for the team at this point!" exclaimed Swanson. "There is a large quantity of young freshmen and sophomores dominating the team. Those team members who are in their final years of competition have done much to mold the character of this year's team."

Co-captains for this year are Paul Wilson and David McIntire. Paul is the McCurdy award winner for being the outstanding swimmer in New England. He was also nominated the past three years for the most valuable swimmer, and went undefeated in the New England Championships in the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke. Furthermore, he was the champion in the 200 Individual Medley. Paul's greatest accomplishment was to be the first ever to qualify for the Eastern Championships, which is a step above the New England Championships and just one below the NCAA.

According to Coach Swanson, "John Magda, freestyle swimmer, has done a fine job for us. He placed in the New England Championships the past three years. He was looked to very much this year for his strong leadership."

Another outstanding aqua husky is Dave Keller. "Dave has done an excellent job for the team. He placed in the New England Championships in the last three years. His highest personal best point score in diving was against a tough Vermont competitor," stated Coach Swanson.

Because last year's record was a top notch 9-1, the aqua huskies hope to finish the season by placing in the top three of the New England Championships in keeping with last year's record where they placed a competitive second.

HUSKY SENIORS DOMINATE THE WATERS

The women's swimming and diving team, now 6-1, has a good shot at winning the New England Championships and defending the ECAC Championship. The team has a strong contingency of senior athletes as well as a strong freshman class. According to Coach Swanson, "This brings a good continuity and blend to the entire team."

"One of the goals of the team is to win the New England Championships this year. We will have a difficult time doing that, but it's within our reach," she commented.

Seniors, Paula Smakowski and Amy Tresky both were finalists in the New England and ECAC Championships for the last three years. "Paula has been a real extra bonus for the team. She was a walk-on with little or no experience in diving. She has excelled beyond anyone's expectations of her," stated Coach Swanson. During her first years of competition she placed sixth in the New England Championships. She has placed in the finals every year for the past three years.

Amy Tresky is yet another outstanding senior on the team. "Amy's diving has improved tremendously over the past years. Her dedication to the sport has taken the team to many favorable positions," added Swanson.

Another victory for the husky swimming and diving team is the fact that this may be the first year that a university has had a women's swimmer of the year, Kathy Deignan, and a men's swimmer of the year, and diver, all at once. Hopefully the aqua huskies can maintain this fantastic husky record setting fever to the end of the season.

PAR FOR THE COURSE

One of NU's best kept secrets is its very successful golf team under the direction of head coach, David Fraizer. The team's Parsons Field is the Stow Country Club in Stow, Massachusetts. The virtually unknown team is the defending champions of the Greater Boston Championships, defeating Harvard in playoff action last spring. They later went on to the Massachusetts Intercollegiate Tournament and earned a 2nd place finish.

1989 business administration graduate, John Simmons was awarded the All New England Performer award and was also the winner of the Alumni Perpetual Trophy given to the MVP of each team. Coach Fraizer hopes the 1988-1989 golf season will see the team defend its GBC title and also capture the Mass. Intercollegiate title. He feels the return of his outstanding players, Chris Diorio, Sean Maher and John and Andy Drohen, will make this task a little easier.

TINA CARDINALE

What did a girl on ice skates with a fantastic cord mean to all of us? In Calgary, it could have een Debbie Thomas but on Huntington Avenue a rl on skates wearing the number fourteen meant at it was one of Northeastern's most talented and tstanding female athletes. Tina Cardinale, a 1989 aduate, was on Northeastern's Women's Hockey am and led her team to the ECAC's.

Tina began playing hockey, a sport which females e now just beginning to break into, at the young ge of eight. She did not become the great player at she is by taking lessons, instead she watched her der brother and listened to the coaches. Tina ent on to play hockey and various other sports throughout her junior and high school years.

When it came down to choices, Tina had to choose between two sports, soccer or hockey and several colleges. Tina chose to play hockey at Northeastern in order to fulfill her other dream of majoring in Criminal Justice. Throughout Tina's five years at Northeastern, she juggled a hectic and demanding schedule of both hockey and classes. Not only did she attend classes and make plenty of friends, she also was able to score the most points in the league with 180 career points while being captain of the team.

JEFF MCLAUGHLIN

A 6′6″ and 195 lbs. McLaughlin is large by rowing standards but is no overpowering hulk. He is often called "Potato Chip" because of his lanky build. With an a typical rower's hairstyle and an unconventional approach to sports, he is not what one might expect when told he is a world champion and Olympic athlete. Yet, the proof is in the pudding.

The mild mannered architecture major keeps everything in perspective and realizes that rowing is not an end itself, but rather a means to achieve it. High-fives and rah-rah speeches are not what fires his competitive energies.

Jeff came to Northeastern without a heralded athletic record. He had never won a game with final shot or scored a touchdown. What makes hi story more incredible is that he was never eve good enough for the JV teams. However, by th end of his freshman year at NU he had earned a sea in the first freshman eight where he rowed on t garner the Outstanding Freshman Award.

The next year, almost instinctively, Coach Congram put the fledgling in the six seat of the varsity From that point on, the Sheffield native woul never race a single race from any other seat.

After completing a frustrating sophomore seaso in the varsity eight he would spend his summer i the heat of Lake Placid with the pre-elite team There he was being groomed for international competition.

It was not until the following summer that th upstart McLaughlin surprised the rowing elite b making the World Championship Squad. He was virtual unknown from a university that had n fielded a first varsity since the early 80's. He believed that this worked to his advantage, because n one knew what to expect of him.

When his crew captured the gold medal in Copenhagen, questions and talk of the impending '8 Olympics quickly began to surface. Surely, he a lowed his mind to play with the idea but with littl fanfare. He returned to campus to begin his fin campaign as a Husky rower.

For Jeff and the entire Northeastern team thing would begin to fall into place. In 1988, the rig place was the win column. With the return of strok Stephen Potter, who had missed what was to hav been his senior season because of mononucleosi the "Mad Dogs," as they called themselves, went I and climbed to the top of the national ranks.

After capturing the bronze medal at the covete Eastern Sprints, the gold at the intercollegiat Championships and a second place finish at th Nationals it was on to Seoul, South Korea whe Jeff and his Olympic teammates hoped to succes fully defend their world title. When the firewor had completed and the smoke had cleared his med would be covered in bronze. This was of littl disappointment to him because he had accon plished in four years what many never achieve in lifetime.

He is one world class "Potato Chip." Next sto for Jeff: Northeastern University Athletic Hall c Fame.

DONNA PETRSORICH

Take your mark —
Set —
Bang! —

These are the sounds that have echoed through the head of Donna Petrsorich since her days on the Udall Junior High School Boys Track Team. She had to run on the boys team because they didn't have a girls team most of the time she was there. According to Donna, track in her Jr. High days, "was a joke. The coaches didn't want girls on the team so all the girls did was run around the track a few times and do a field event."

Donna expresses the fact that she wasn't sure how to be serious about running because it came so easily to her. As with many many students, she didn't think her family could afford to send her to a private school but she did see track as a possible admissions ticket.

Donna decided to major in Medical Laboratory Science, which NU offered. When she showed an interest in the track program, the track staff offered to pick up the tab on whatever financial aid wouldn't pay. So she set out for Boston.

While at NU, Donna participated in cross country 5,000 meter (approx. 3.± miles) race. At the 1988 Greater Boston Champion Championships, Donna won the 5,000 meter and placed 2nd in the same event at New England's. However, her most comfortable races are in the 1,500 meter (approx. 1 mile) and 3,000 meter (approx. 2 miles) range. Throughout her career, Donna has achieved many records at Northeastern and has also placed 1st and 2nd in many championship races in the Greater Boston, New England and Eastern regions.

Donna, now a nursing major and member of the nursing honor society, found it somewhat difficult to juggle school, co-op and track. Co-op supervisors were not always very understanding and cooperative when track meets came along. Quick to point out to Donna that nursing was her career, track was not. "Track takes more time than you think," reports Petrsorich. Practice includes warming up, actually running and warming down which could wind up taking over 2 hours a day. Despite some of the difficulties, Donna related that she didn't regret getting involved in track and that she would do it again. When asked about the coaching staff, Donna said, "The coaches are great, I loved them!"

Is there life after track? Sure!! As of now, Donna runs for Nike Boston Track Club. The Club, sponsored by Nike, trains members, then organized races against other track clubs.

BOB MCCARTHY "OGRE"

We have all heard the saying "nothing can beat sex," but according to Bob McCarthy better known as Ogre to his teammates, "Rugby is better than sex!"

The rough and rugged sport of rugby attracted Bob as an ideal sport to play. He wanted to try his hand on something other than the usual all American sports. Prior to arriving on the Husky campus he was an established two year (1984-1986) player at West Point Military Academy. Upon playing rugby at NU Bob was chosen in the spring of 1988 by the New England Collegiate XV to play in Australia. Unfortunately, before leaving for Australia he injured his knee in a heated game against Army. Although this prevented him from playing in the games he did fill the role of manager.

Bob commented that the team's attitude toward rugby is a serious one. "There is a greater degree of organization. The team has a strong desire to excel on the field . . ." For the future of the team he said, "I would like to see more financial support and a coach from Northeastern. In order to improve we need a coach who is willing to be at all the practices and games. We need a mentor and to expand our rugby horizons."

Regarding the future of rugby as a sport on the whole Bob anticipates the day when America takes rugby as a serious sport rather than a second rate sport. In this player's own words, "I would like to see rugby on the same level as football."

SUSIE NYBERG

Poise, grace and style have marked the career of Susie Nyberg since she began taking gymnastics essons at the age of five. Competing on the private evel from age ten, prepared her well for her high school years at Acton-Boxboro. From there, Head Coach Holly Szabo of Northeastern University's Women's Gymnastics Team, recruited her and awarded her scholarship money. Happy and nervous about starting college, Susie found it both a big adjustment and intimidating coming to NU, where she now had new coaches, staff and teammates for the first time in ten years. "Everyone who was here was the best in their town gyms," said Nyberg.

Despite majoring in cardiovascular health, which involves work like cardiac rehabilitation for heart attack victims, a good balance with co-op, homework and gymnastics was not hard for Susie to strike because she had always had to do it. "Sometimes though, you feel like you missed some of the social life," said Nyberg. "Gymnastics takes strength and discipline. The pain isn't what you remember, it's the close friendships you remember."

Susie through her four years on the team participated in all around competition with her best performances coming from floor exercise and vault. Although her freshman through junior years were good, Susie found her senior year the best because of the team's first post season competition since she started with the Lady Huskies. The team, led under second year captain Nyberg, came in 1st at New England's and 2nd at the ECAC's, losing to Towsend State in Maryland. To cap their Cinderella year off, the team went to the NCAA's at Penn State and finished 4th where her recruiting coach, Holly Szabo, won Coach of the Year honors.

Now that NU gymnastics is part of the past for Susie, she still goes to the gym and teaches aerobics to the new gymnastics team. She also teaches gymnastics at a private gym, instructing kids from age three to high school level. After graduating from NU this June, Susie hopes to take a bike trip across the country.

IN MEMORY

At the close of the 1988 sports season, Northeastern University and especially the entire rowing community was dealt a severe blow with the tragic death of Charles Smith, the team boatman. Smith, who had joined the team the year before after being with Harvard, died in a van accident while traveling with a portion of the team to the IRA Regatta.

Despite not having been with the Huskies for long, he quickly endeared himself to the team and helped build the pride that undoubtedly led to Northeastern's crew team's success in 1988.

. . . He is greatly missed.

Cooperative Education — An education that works? NU's prized possession is its world famous cooperative education plan. It began with the College of Engineering in 1909 and was later adopted by the College of Business Administration, Arts and Sciences, Pharmacy, Nursing, Boston Bouve, Criminal Justice and the School of Engineering Technology (day program).

The major premise behind this program is the unique educational method that what students learn in the work-place is just as valuable as what they learn in the classroom. The salaries earned on co-op help defray the costs of tuition, room and board, books and other day to day expenses. However, the question is how correct is this premise?

The following are interviews with different seniors regarding their co-op experiences. They were randomly selected by co-op advisors and the Cauldron staff. Some of them had the "Best and the Brightest" co-ops and some haven't.

TRACY PITINO

Courtesy State House Photographer

Tracy Pitino from Easton, Pennsylvania heard about Northeastern University from a high school friend. She decided it was what she wanted in an Economics program and started here as an Economics major in 1984. But wait!! Isn't this a Criminal Justice co-op interview? Yes, it is! Tracy found Economics here 'boring,' so after taking an Economics of Crime class which she "loved" she switched her major to Criminal Justice and has never regretted it.

Tracy's first co-op was with the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Counsel which she describes as "a good first co-op job but there was too much clerical work."

Tracy's second and present co-op job is at the Massachusetts Committee on Criminal Justice where she has worked since 1987. Her duties have ranged from working with a juvenile justice specialist to determine whether or not juveniles were held in Houses of Correction beyond a specified period of time, to taking part in a domestic violence, battered women and rape working groups. In her duties with the counsel she meets with the Governor of Massachusetts, Michael Dukakis, once a month on the Governor's Anti-Crime Counsel.

Tracy feels that she has made great contacts with people like Governor Dukakis and Boston Police Commissioner Francis Roache at her job. When I asked Tracy about after graduation employment opportunities with the Massachusetts Committee on Criminal Justice she was not sure of her future. She did say that if she was offered a position she would consider working there.

Tracy's philosophy on Northeastern is "college is what you put into it." When asked whether or not she would recommend Northeastern to anyone, her response was a definite yes.

SAM HEIDARI

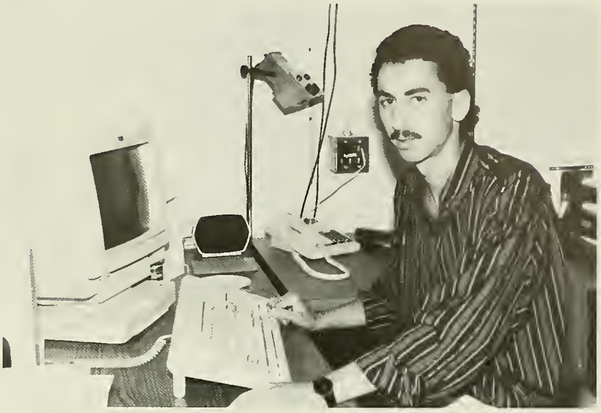
Hendra Soetijahja



Hendra Soetjahja

Some students come to Northeastern University for their specific field of study, while others come for its unique location in College Town USA, but the majority like Sam Heidari came for the world famous cooperative education program.

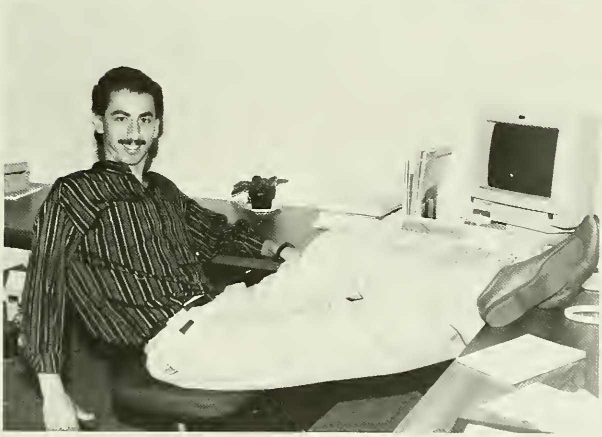
Sam is a senior electrical engineering major in Division A. He is originally from Iran, but home is Menlo Park, California now. Sam says, "Co-op is a good opportunity for me because I am a foreign student."

The nuclear science laboratory at MIT in Cambridge was Sam's first co-op. As a young sophomore here he held that prominent position of System Operator of the lab. "I did the daily operations and system programming of the computer. This was my first computer experience." Sam later returned for six more months at MIT.

"The best co-op was at IBM in Yorktown Heights, New York. I rented an apartment with two other co-ops. We had a great time." At IBM Sam did process development for VLSI, a very large signal integration lab Fabrication.

"It was a positive experience because I was in a research environment working with people that you read about in textbooks. It was a good professional experience for learning. The negative aspect was I got looked down at being in the research environment for not having a PhD."

After nine months at IBM Sam left for some experience in electro-magnetic engineering. He accepted a three month position at Northeastern's Plasma Science Lab, Center for Electromagnetic Research.



Hendra Soetjahja

"Although this job offers considerably less pay than IBM, I opted for the position at NU because of the opportunity to work with electromagnetics."

"I haven't been home since 1984 to Tehran. I'm used to the feeling of missing my family. It's great when they come to visit but when they have to leave it's very disappointing."

When I asked Sam if he would go through the co-op program again he answered, "Definitely! Going through a co-op program has helped me a lot. It was well worth it, just living out of the state on my IBM co-op was a good experience. I was able to go away. The co-op will benefit me when I apply to graduate schools. The co-op experience is a very positive one."

Jennie M. Lee

LINDA CLARK

Jennie M. Lee

Linda Clark of Waterbury, Connecticut was initially attracted to the Northeastern University Cooperative Education program through numerous television advertisements the university ran during her high school days. A positive opinion from high school counselors regarding the program prompted Linda to further pursue the program as an electrical engineering major.

As a result her first job was held at GME, a government contractor. Here she traveled a forty-five minute daily commute from Boston. (The GTE office is in Westboro, Massachusetts.) Her position as a specifications engineer held her fully responsible for writing and drawing product specification reports. Linda commented that the three month co-op with GTE was, ". . . valuable because it provided me with the necessary technical writing and drawing experience." Bound by a contract for two consecutive terms, Linda returned to GTE with the same responsibilities.

At the time of her second co-op job Linda had transferred into the industrial engineering program. Her second job was at Digital Equipment Corporation in Maynard, Massachusetts which accounted for the best job experience for this future engineer!! Her exciting title of Product Safety Engineer gave her proficiency in testing products for human safety in hypothetical situations. This was an exceptional challenge because while testing for human safety she had to keep in mind all of the government regulations and requirements. "This was the best job I held and I hope to find a permanent position after graduation with them."

Linda felt a need to gain worthwhile cultural experience. To fulfill this, she accepted a non-engineering co-op position at the university's African American Institute. Hard work on a reading and study skills program, Ujima, for minority students, gave Linda the cultura aspect she was searching for.

Further as a final co-op job employed by Johnson and Johnson in Braintree, Linda hoped to pinpoint specifically what she wants to do as a future industrial engineer. "My co-op experience has been good when compared to other students, but they aren't the greatest. It showed me what I don't want to do rather than what I want to do."

When asked if Linda would recommend the program to prospective students, she replied "A few years ago before other competing universities and colleges developed internship and co-op programs I would have said yes, but now more and more of these universities and colleges are offering these programs which are just as effective."

Here is a rare shot of Dan relaxing at his desk in Clairol's New York City headquarters on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan. A more appropriate picture might be one of Dan scrutinizing the latest Lotus reports with one hand on the phone and the other on his computer terminal. Dan says, "At Clairol I earn money the old-fashioned way, I earn it!" Hickey credits Northeastern's prestigious co-op program with allowing him to work in the "heartbeat of Manhattan," learning corporate finance in one of the country's biggest companies. He felt he was well prepared though commenting, "Thank God I took Manny Fi (Managerial Finance)!" Along with Dan's great work experience, he has come across a couple of well-knowns you may have heard of, Ronald Reagan and Donald Trump. He only saw Reagan, but shook hands with Trump, who Dan says, "seems bigger than life."

A look at Dan's resume shows us that he has gotten closer and closer to his personal utopia, the Big Apple, with each co-op job. His first job was at Hickey-Finn Insurance in Poughkeepsi, New York and then at IBM in Tarrytown, New York. Dan claims, "The closer to the city, the better, that is where the real action is!"

SHERRY TUCH

Jennie M. Lee

Somerset, New Jersey, Exit 9 is the road home for Sherry Tuch, a studio art major. This major within the College of Arts and Sciences is categorized as one of the few and far between at Northeastern University.

As a freshman attending Tufts University Sherry was tempted by the familiar phrase "an education that works" and a generous financial aid offer from Northeastern. As a result Sherry transferred to join other students already enrolled in "an education that works."

Unfortunately, she was faced with a shortage of available co-op jobs for art majors. "It is normal for fifteen to twenty students to interview for one job. Sometimes there are offers of forty hours a week non-paying internships, but hey, bills are a reality."

"My first co-op job was at the Student Activities business office at the university. It was a valuable learning experience, I was able to become more proficient with numbers because I worked on activity group accounts. This job had nothing to do with my major, after all, I was told by my advisor that this would be a good learning experience, because sometimes in life you have to take the tough breaks."

Well, after this tough break Sherry hit another rough spot for her next co-op term. Because of an extreme shortage of jobs through the co-op department Sherry started her own company. The WILD BERRY WEAR COMPANY evolved. Sherry painted colorful silkscreened t-shirts and sold them to buyers. To supplement this income from the Wild Berry Wear she moonlighted in the evenings at Office Specialists.

Her last shot for the co-op department to offer a job associated with the art field was once again a "tough break" for Sherry. Her final co-op was with the Northeastern University Center for Cooperative Education doing labor market studies. Here she traveled to co-op employers to interview them regarding their experiences with NU co-ops.

"Despite my difficulties in never finding an art related co-op position it has benefited me. Believe it or not. I became more realistic regarding my expectations in the "real world" and the labor market. I would take co-op if I could do it over because the classroom needs supplementing. This supplementing is the professionalism and maturity yo gain through co-op."

"My only advice to other art majors is try not to become caught up in the number shuffle in the co-op system. Investigate other possibilities on your own."

"I really enjoyed co-op and my overall experience at Northeastern. I will never forget the friends I have made. People here on an individual basis make all the difference."

Jennie M. Le

AMITAVA MUKHERJEE

Michelle L. Morisseau

People from all over the world have been coming to Boston for over 200 years. Five years ago, a boy of 17 years came to Boston. This was not his first visit to the United States, not his first journey abroad. Amitava Mukherjee was born in India, grew up in Venezuela, went to Mansfield University, Pa., and then ventured forth to Northeastern University.

Coming from such a diverse background, what did Northeastern have to offer Amitava from all other educational nstitutions throughout the world. According to Amit, Boston and the Cooperative Education Program attracted him, like it attracts most of us. The first attraction is basically the same, it is what we decide to do with it that makes it a personal, individual experience. Amit made it a personal, individual experience. Amit made it valuable hrough close, personal relationships developed over the past five years, knowledge obtained hrough text, class, and living every day to the fullest; and the co-op experiences.

Coming to Northeastern, Amit discovered a diverse population of students and a positive cultural mix. This made Amit's difficult curriculum of an electrical engineer with a concentration in computer science much easier to cope with. One attribute of Amitava's, beside his in-depth knowledge of many languages, that aided him in making friends is his outgoing personality. The first time meeting him, he puts you at ease with his sheepish smile and ready laugh. With Amit's personality it is easy to understand why he did well on his co-ops, General Electric Lynn, Ma. then I.B.M. Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

Working at General Electric, Amit dealt with information systems, first as an assistant systems manager, then assistant to the project leader. Amit found G.E. to be a "big plant" with a lot of maneuverability in different projects. The projects were interesting with great opportunity to learn from many groups. The minuses included tedious work in data entry, and other dirty work. But Amit's attitude is "Sometimes you get dirty work but in the end if results are good, they pay off for much more interesting jobs."

During the two co-op periods spent at I.B.M. TJ Watson Research Center, Yorktown Heights, N.Y. as a junior engineer, Amitava was involved in important projects building hardware with a lot of responsibility. He enjoyed the top quality of his superiors and had great respect for their knowledge and intelligence. Experiencing the wide range of topics presented and learning semiconductor design and fabrication satisfied his career goals. He also enjoyed living near the Big Apple. At times his job was routine but he asked a lot of questions and made himself known to many people.

From his experiences he is now realistic as to what awaits him in the corporate lifestyle. He is also ready for the lifestyle both professionally and personally. Amit considers himself a cost conscious engineer.

CHRISTINE MY-LAN DINH

Debbie Henriksen

Debbie Henrikensen

Born in Paris, France to Vietnamese parents, Christine Dinh gives her perspective on co-op not only as a business major but also as a trilingual international student.

Christine transferred from the University of Technology in Paris to Northeastern's College of Business Administration in 1986 where she had undertaken a double major in Marketing and International Business. During this time, she has been honored with the United States Achievement Academy Award in 1987 (granted to the top 10% college students in the U.S.) and with a listing in the 1988 edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Christine's first co-op job was at General Foods Corp. in White Plains, NY, where she worked for three months in the Jell-O Desserts group. As a marketing Research Assistant, she was responsible for developing test product reports, assisting with research development projects for packaged desserts. In addition, she analyzed sample studies and data from marketing data bases.

This was Christine's first job in the U.S. and it gave her the opportunity to develop her "business jargon" skills as well as her general communication abilities. In addition, the co-op at General Foods taught her many invaluable lessons about the business field and the "behind-the-scenes work and challenge of a consumer good such as a package of Jell-O."

For her second co-op term, Christine spent six months at IBM's Research Division in Yorktown Heights, NY where as a Planning Assistant, she assisted managers in manpower monitoring, and facility planning.

The educational aspects of working at IBM were many: "I gained a tremendous amount of knowledge about computer hardware and software and the research side of a corporation and its business implications. I saw the financial aspects of doing business in a computerized world with state-of-the-arts technology." Christine considers it a privilege to have worked here for several reasons; first, the location is IBM's headquarters research, secondly most other co-ops and interns are from the Ivy League, thirdly, since she was surrounded by scientists, some of the world's most intelligent and highly educated minds.

One great accomplishment for Christine at IBM was the level of responsibility she was able to attain. Some of the reports she tabulated went to the director of the department, "One even went up to the Research Division Vice-President."

Overall, Christine feels lucky to have had co-op positions at these two companies. As a business student, she was able to mature professionally and to learn things that could never have been taught in a classroom. As an international student, she gained the chance to observe first-hand the American corporate culture. Looking back, Christine feels that her co-op jobs have been "priceless experiences."

JOHN RATCLIFFE

Jim Gillmartin

John Ratcliffe had the same ecision to make that many high hool seniors had to make, where to o to college. However, this decision as a little more difficult to make ecause unlike most of us who have ved in the United States all of our ves, John had to make the decision ased on the limited knowledge he ad of living in the states as a oungster. John spent some of his nior high and all of his high school ears living in Vicenza, Italy as the on of the Director of Engineering nd Housing/Fire Marshall of the .S. military post in Vicenza. When e asked a friend who attended MASS Boston where to go he uggested Boston because of its size, historical importance and its ties to the European culture. After a close view of the schools in Boston, he chose Northeastern for the co-op program in Civil Engineering.

Since his start at NU, his one and only co-op job has been at Charles Stark Draper Laboratories in Cambridge, Massachusetts. His work is on projects Draper has contracted from the Department of Defense. Specifically, the work deals with structural analysis — stress analysis in different components of different things. Unfortunately, because of the confidential nature of the work that comes from the Department of Defense, he would not be too specific as to the work he does. He was able to demonstrate for example, if someone showed him a missile cover and it would be his job to determine where its weakest points lie. John says he enjoys his work and there aren't too many hassles. He had on-the-job training, his responsibilities increased each time he went back to work and the supervision he received depended on the individual projects they gave him.

Although he has had a great amount of success at his co-op job he is not considering them for a permanent position after graduation. He is hoping to join the Army's Corps of Engineers and later move back to Europe, preferably Vicenza.

JACQUELINE MOQUIN

RUSSELL B STEARNS CENTER
Cooperative Education

Sam Heidari

Jacqueline Moquin is a senior in the Boston Bouve College of Human Development majoring in Elementary Education. She has had many co-op jobs that have helped her better define what she does and does not want to do.

Jacqueline's first co-op job was at Cambridge Ellis Preschool in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Her position as an assistant teacher gave her a variety of classroom experiences. She supervised children ages 2-4 years in the classroom and on the playground, devised class plans and daily classroom meetings, and organized art and cooking activities. Jacqueline says that she learned a great deal from that job. She learned how to associate with preschool children, how to devise lesson plans for them. She realized that she was not suited to work with this age group.

Winter Hill Community School in Somerville, Mass. was Jacqueline's second co-op job. At this job she assisted the head teacher in a special needs classroom. Her primary task was to plan and teach lessons on a daily basis to a six year old boy. Other responsibilities included supervising children in the lunchroom and playground. She also led activities in the classroom. Through this job she was able to learn to deal with special needs children and how they need to be taught differently from other children. More importantly she realized she would not like to work with them.

Her last co-op job was with Employment Resources, Inc. in Cambridge, Massachusetts. This company found summer employment jobs for kids 14-20 years of age. Specifically, her position entailed counseling for the 14-20 year olds. Daily she visited and checked up on jobs, monitored work in progress, collected time sheets, and distributed checks. Unlike her previous two jobs this was not found through NU and there is good job potential. During the summers, Jacqueline felt this co-op helped her to manage her time better and learned to deal with teenagers and write lesson plans for this age group.

Overall, Jacqueline has had a taste of what is available through NU co-op department in her major. It was a helpful learning experience because it taught her a lot about herself and other people. After all isn't that what co-op is partly about? To give students an idea of what's available, and get jobs and discern where their true interests lie. I guess NU Co-op did its job.

STEPHEN FOLTZ

EORGE A. & LORRAINE C. SNELL
ENGINEERING CENTER

William Young

Co-op has effected every student at Northeastern differently. For Stephen Foltz, a division A senior majoring in Mechanical Engineering, it has been a positive one. He felt it is practical to receive "hands on experience" and to be confident that the major he chose is the correct one. The extra pocket money received from co-op and part-time employment is more than an average college student would have in the same situation. At that moment in life when you are faced with obtaining a job in the "real" world, not the "co-op" world, Stephen feels he has an edge over graduates from other colleges and universities due to his past co-op experiences. Another recurring fear of many seniors in other educational institutions is the omnipresent fact that they must now create a resume, cover letter and take part in an interview. Stephen does not experience that fear due to the interviews prior to obtaining the ever important co-op positions. Finally, the rotating classes motivates Stephen to learn because he possesses some understanding of how the information will be applied.

Due to the fact we are living in the real world and not fantasy land, negatives exist in all situations. According to Stephen, "The only minus for co-op is being away from Boston and the "atmosphere."

Stephen has held a position with General Dynamics Electric Boat Division in Groton, CT. General Dynamics is a nuclear submarine builder for the Navy. Stephen's responsibilities were to assist in Senior engineering jobs, and supervising shipboard testing on missile components. This co-op job was convenient because it was close in proximity to Stephen's home.

Northup Corporation was Stephen's next stop. Once again, Stephen was assisting in problems encountered while testing missile guidance systems and inspecting them for defects and causes for rejection.

The few eyeopeners realized from co-op are: understanding situations from management's position; the inner workings of a company and its culture; and the responsibility of a permanent job compared to a co-op job.

Finally, after having received hi diploma while trying to make his way through the masses in the Boston Garden, Stephen stops and tries to analyze what 5 years and $60,000 has given him. Both companies were different in what he learned. General Dynamics involved designing hard core engineering, which he prefers, whereas Northrop involved manufacturing. Both companies have extended an offer of employment once Stephen has graduated.

ollege of Arts and Sciences

onald McAllister — Acting Dean

Northeastern University Corporation's llege of Liberal Arts was established in 35. We now know them as Northeastn University and the College of Arts Sciences. Then or now, the college is ique unto itself.

t was the year 1943 when six women dents entered Northeastern for the st time. Four of the women were in eral Arts, the other in Engineering Business. All of these women comted their five-years and received dees for their accomplishments. In 1949, rtheastern saw its first female student, rjorie Faunce, graduate from the Cole of Liberal Arts.

urthermore, during World World II rtheastern's College of Liberal Arts suffered more than any of its other leges and is still going strong. Many rtheastern students were able to complete undergraduate study, and many were drafted. In 1940, the College of Liberal Arts had an enrollment of 503, and in 1943 the number had dropped to 268. This spring there are approximately 563 students graduating from the College of Arts and Sciences.

Today, Northeastern University's College of Arts and Sciences stands alone in that it has 19 academic departments, offering the widest range of majors and minors to students. This range is generally divided into three categories: the fine arts and humanities, the social sciences, and sciences and mathematics.

Of these categories, the student has a choice among African-American studies, anthropology, art and architecture, biology, chemistry, economics, English, geology, human services, journalism, linguistics, mathematics, modern languages (French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish), music, philosophy and religion, physics, applied physics, political science, psychology, sociology, speech communication, or theater and dance as a major program.

Special attention can be paid to the journalism program. It is one of the youngest majors added to the college in 1964. Two years ago it was called the Journalism Department; today, it is called the School of Journalism. Currently, there are 500 students in the School of Journalism with 40 of them graduating this spring.

The College of Arts and Sciences has continued to thrive and expand, carrying with it the history of the College of Liberal Arts for a better education for all.

College of Business Administration

I feel kind of like a baby bird being forced to fly for the first time. No, seriously — I know it sounds a bit corny — but think about it: we've been in business "ground school" now for about 5 years where they've spent all this time trying to redefine everything we ever learned in high school. Spelling used to be CAT or BOOK. But we business grads now use our own alphabet: EPS, ROI, CEO, MGT, WSJ, SWOT, HRM, JIT, MBA, FIFO, LBO . . . And math? Forget division and multiplication. Now it's divestiture and mergers. History used to be Christopher Columbus, 1776 or the Magna Carta. Ask any business major about past events and you'll get a case analysis for an answer. Seems we've spent our whole education doing case analyses!!! Problem statement, situation anaylsis, alternatives, recommendations . . . Restructure the organization! Cut costs! Increase ad expenditure! Improve ratios! Issue more equity! Don't mess with the corporate culture! We've saved more companies than Lee Iacocca!!

On this note, I have to direct a comment to all those non-business majors who dismiss the CBA as the "easy way to go," the place for people who can't cut it in Engineering or Medicine. To those of you who think case anaylsis is easier than building a computer, consider this: as a NU business student, I may have been given fewer hard facts than you but I have learned a way of thinking. A math formula will come out the same every time you punch in a certain number. Two chemicals mixed together under given circumstances will always react the same. But there's no formula for business and there is always more than one right answer so we need a different kind of analytical knowledge. (On the other hand, you can shoot all my arguments down when we talk about starting salaries . . .)

After ground school comes the flight simulations: co-op. Some of us got to flap our wings a little harder, a little louder than others. And after having one co-op where I netted $150.00 per week, I know that some of us got better pay-offs than others. But for the most part, we all got a taste: of small businesses and large corporations, of being peons and of actually being relied upon, of being forced to grow up a little faster than some of our friends at other schools. But after a "cost/benefit" anaylsis, I know I wouldn't change a thing. So now it's time to put on our flight helmet and our power suits and make that firs jump into oblivion. We've earned ou wings but do they really work? I mea this isn't Micromatic anymore, this is it And quite frankly, I'm a little scared I've had some great job experiences decent grades, some excellent professors and even some English speakin TAs and yet . . . it's a cutthroat, dog eat-"bird" world out there.

As I finish my last group presentation, write my last paper, take my fina final exam, I feel like I'm standing o the edge of the nest. A silly analogy Maybe. But there are a few parallels Along with the butterflies in the stomach, I've developed a streak of confidence. I peer over the edge and se that it's a long way down; but that's O — that's not the direction I'm headed. look around and see that a lot of m friends have already made the jump an they're doing fine. And what about th rest of us? Some time soon, we'll jump flap our wings — and SOAR!

So, Now You Have a Degree in Criminal Justice

Hurrah! We have finally reached the magic number! What magic number?! 172!!! The exact number of credits necessary to obtain that long awaited Bachelor of Science in Criminal Justice.

Through the years of striving toward he 172 credits, we have learned many egal theories and few other tricks of he trade too. For instance, we have earned the difference between KV and KA. Well, if you don't know now, you haven't been attending your classes. More importantly, we can differentiate between beyond a reasonable doubt and a preponderance of the evidence. We will always remember some professors, advisors, classes and oh yes, cases more vividly than others. One case you should never forget is Mapp v. Ohio. Some NU Criminal Justice majors can't count on ten fingers the number of times this case was referred to in their classes.

The following were solicited from seniors in the class of 1989 Criminal Justice College as their more vivid memories as a Criminal Justice major.

— Doing over fifteen briefs a week for "you know who's" criminal law class.

— Being referred to as a future police officer, when in fact the last thing you want to be is a police officer.

— Taking the rap from your friends who are business and engineering majors that your major allows you to catch all the afternoon soaps and more z's than other "real" majors.

— Never forgetting the time you had to do a court observation and you observe your professor being charged in court for a crime.

We are sure that you could think of a few of your own. The fact remains, YOU MADE IT!!! You made it through the classes, the lectures, the readings, the briefs, the observations, the group projects and the papers. Congratulations!!!

How To Figure The Amount of Area Copy Will take on Layout
① Figure how many picas you wish to use.
② Count the characters of an average line in the copy. For ex. 30 characters per line.
③ Multiply # of picas by # of characters
④ At 12 pt. there are 2.04 characters per pica therefore multiply 2.04 by # of picas you chose to use in step ①

FRIDAY'S
ONE WAY

Nancy Lynn Flatle

Let's hit Fridays

Where at NU?

Bill Young

What a victory!

THE MOST STRESSFUL BOSTON ENCOUNTERS

Can you spare a dime kid? You bite your tongue from grumbling, "Can you spare a dime for my $13,000 tuition bill?"

On your way to that inevitable eight o'clock final the T encounters a power failure while your encountering a coronary.

Oh wonderful a parking space! Your friend screams, "Nab it quick!!!" Aah yes, another typical Boston parking episode.

Pauk your caa in Haavad Yaad, now let's potty. You respond, "What? Come again?"

Friday it was sunny and 60°. Yesterday it was raining and 30° and today it's snowing and damn cold. Gotta love the Boston weather especially those accurate forecasters.

Oh my God!!! My car is missing. Stolen perhaps?!!

Realizing that you are no longer in hicksville, but in the big bad city on your own.

Eeek!!! Another cockroach!

Very reasonable rent. One bedroom $1,200.

Ever want to find a Boston cop? They're over in Dunkin Donuts on Boylston Street.

Rushing to Logan you get stuck in Callahan Tunnel and miss the last flight out.

THE MOST STRESSFUL YEARBOOK ENCOUNTERS

Being in the yearbook room late at night and having unknown people making funny faces through the door.

Relying on Federal Express to pick up our next day deadline and finding out they forgot about the pick up!!!

Using typewriters that don't correct, backspace, return or feed paper properly.

Cropping pictures and copy fitting, what's that, it's necessary for correct layout of pages!?!

Editing over fifteen hundred senior names, addresses, and majors during mid-terms week.

All flash batteries died all at once while the group to be photoed is posed in front of the camera.

Negligent Acquiescence (Courtesy of Professor Norman Bates)

Damn it!!! Did we miss another deadline?

Rolls of important film needed for tomorrow's deadline is deemed missing similar to those notes you need for the exam.

Interesting to find out that a co-editorship just doesn't quite hack it.

Constantly coming to the realization that this book will never allow us to have a social life again.

Having to get into the darkroom for late night maneuvers and losing the one and only key.

THE MOST STRESSFUL NU ENCOUNTERS

No, I'm sorry we'll have to send you to university hospital for an infamous three hour wait in their emergency room.

Aren't we lucky, the first class subjected to a course dubbed Middler Year Writing Requirement.

Never heard of you, maybe you should check if you're registered for this course.

Can you believe that Professor Staff actually teaches all those classes.

Yes, once again you're blocked from your classes.

Anyway I chose NU for those spacious dorm rooms and those obnoxious neighbors upstairs who play volleyball above my head.

Northeastern not Northwestern.

Dodge Library no explanation necessary.

Just wait one more minute we'll get your cash release (that was half a day ago).

Excited but afraid your partner may object to those new condom machines with the purple flavored glow in the dark condoms aren't you buddy?

No! You can't have the missing pages from your packet you have to purchase the $20.00 packet over again. (Courtesy of Express Copy)

Not again! Husky Five-O once again refuses to respond to a call so another student bites the dust.

I swear that print out of your report was here on top of the trash can. (What better time to crusade against landfills?)

Encountered those nasty so called people in food services who issue your food card in Speare, if so now you'll never want to eat again.

THE MOST STRESSFUL ROOMMATE ENCOUNTERS

Coming back to your dorm from a long relaxful weekend at home, but to find your obnoxious roommate has worn your favorite shirt, ate all your chocolate and drank all your beer.

Obtuse, ornery, outrageously inconsiderate. Yea, Mom that about describes my roommate perfectly, not to mention psychotic and neurotic!

Never received that one important call from that special someone. Well we suggest you check with Mr. I Don't Write Messages Down or Mr. I Forgot To Tell You.

Grin and Bear It. What NU housing says when you need that housing change or when your heater conks out or better yet when you're living with godzilla the killer roommate.

Ridiculous!! What a student has to pay for a shoe box. Even more ridiculous the student is expected to fit everything including one giant life size poster of your favorite T.A. in that shoe box housing calls a double.

All right!! Your roommate wimps out of the weekly cleaning, but are they aware that their Mommy and Daddy are coming into town today?

Theorizing on original ways to let your roommate know that you hate it when his girlfriend stays over every single night, and night, and night.

Saved you think. Your roommate has gone to visit her significant other, but instead she brings him over for the whole weekend. YUCK BIG TIME!!!

RECIPIENTS OF THE 1989 WHO'S WHO AMONG AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES

The following is a list of 1989 graduating seniors who were chosen to be recipients of the Who's Who Among the American Universities and Colleges Award. The Office of Dean of Students mails to the individual colleges distribution person recommendation forms. This distribution person in turn, distributes these forms to the college, faculty and staff to nominate students who they feel have made noteworthy contributions to Northeastern University and its community. The recommendations are reviewed by the Office of Student Affairs who serve as the selection committee. The selection committee base their final decisions upon the students' recommendations, grades, community service and campus activities.

TODAY IS FRIDAY

FRIDAY'S SCHEDULE WILL BE

FOLLOWED FOR BASIC COLLEGES AND

GRADUATE CLASSES 8 A.M. TO 4:05 P.M.

NO CHANGE FOR UC-LC AND P.T. ENG.

Wouldn't we have liked to see this instead of the infamous "Today is Monday" on those Fridays after a holiday when the registrar would tell us that this Friday we'll be following Monday's schedule?!?

Take the "T" to class, no way, let's bike it!

COLOPHON

The colophon, according to Webster's II New Riverside Dictionary is, "an inscription, usually at the end of a book, providing publication facts." You realize that these are not life and death things that you should know. However, when you and your child are sitting on the sofa 15 years from now and you are bragging about your college days at NU and your child says, "Wow, what a beautiful cover on the book!" Then asks, "Gee, I wonder what kind of grain this is?" You may not know the answer at the top of your head but you will be confident that you know where to find the answer, in the colophon.

Volume 69 of the Northeastern University Cauldron was printed by Taylor Publishing Company of Dallas, Texas. Our Taylor representatives were David Honnold and Terry Pierce.

Senior photographs were shot and processed by Varden Studios of Rochester, New York. Our Varden representative was Paul Bilgore. The June 1988 and January 1989 photo sittings were shot by photographer James Psyhos. Photographer Bill Hawkins shot the senior photos at the October 1988 sittings.

The paper stock of the 16 page color section is 80lb. enamel. The remainder of the book is 80lb. matte. The endsheets, (those are the beautiful skyline photos of Boston), are 65lb. coated cover stock.

The cover was designed with handtooled grain in red 023 with black 910 lettering. The seal of Northeastern University is embossed in metalique gold.

There are many varieties of type used in the 1989 Cauldron. Some are Chancery. English Script and Seville Italic. Generally, Seville Bold was used for headlines and Seville script was used for the body type.

Lastly, the 1989 Cauldron had a press run of 2,600 copies which were distributed free of charge to the graduating seniors.

SPECIAL THANKS

The Cauldron staff would like to extend special thanks to those individuals who have generously assisted us. They gave their time to address our requests for information, photographs, and data. Dave Enderlin from the International Student Office for compiling the international student statistics for us so quickly.

Jack Grinnold, Director of Sports Information, for obtaining some of the team sports photographs. Brian Hill for the photographs of Jeff McLaughlin. J. D. Levine for his photographs. NU News for their photographs. Laura Ritcker for allowing us to go into her apartment at weird hours to photograph the endsheets.

Yearbooks are used to recall sentimental times, similar to a scrapbook. Taking the best and worst of those college days and condensing them into a book. That is what the 1989 Cauldron, volume 69 is all about. A Moment In Your Life was chosen as the theme because it reflected a sentiment one will always pause to think about in life. A few years from now some of you will flip through these pages and see a photograph of an old forgotten friend or read an article and exclaim, "Hey, I remember!"

The word Cauldron is defined as a large melting pot. We interpreted this to mean a melting pot of very diverse lives, emotions, interests and thoughts of the students of NU. We have focused on seniors of diverse backgrounds and interests throughout the book in photography and copy. The seniors who were chosen for the spotlight interviews were suggested by administrators, faculty, advisors and staff.

Through the making of this yearbook we have found that life here at Northeastern University is what you made of it. Only you can decide if the last five years was well worth it.

So, on behalf of the Cauldron staff we would like to wish the graduates of the Class of 1989 the best of luck and happy successful lives.

Cauldron Staff
